

DEPRESSION ERA SCRIPT

We recently ran into a mini-hoard of copper scrip from the Great Depression (no, not last year...the 1930s). These coins were privately minted for the F.W. Poe Manufacturing Company (known locally as Poe Mill) of Greenville, South Carolina. These coins were used to pay the cotton mill workers when there was a shortage of cash or when the Mill wanted a captive audience for their own (and often over-priced) commissary stores. Although common during the Depression Era these historical items have nearly disappeared and are not seen today except in museums or private collections. They make great historical gifts—especially cherished by anyone who lived through the 1930s. Own a great piece of history for under $8 bucks!
